SENSATIONAL ARREST.

CHARLES G. Mc DANIEL IN SERIOUS TROUBLE.

Charged With Breaking Into W. S. Boales' House On November 17th—Trial Next Wednesday.

On the morning on November 17 it was reported that someone had entered the bed room of Mrs. Mollie Summers, in the boarding house of W. S. Boales, on Ninth street.

Mrs. Summers, who occupied an upstairs room with her child, was awakened about 3 a.m. to find a man in her room, without coat and hat and in his sox feet. She screamed and the intruder attempted to take hold of her and she sprang out of bed and was dodging about the room, eluding the man who was making persistent efforts to catch her, when she screamed around the house. Her sister, Miss Lois Lacy, ran from an adjoining room and about the same time Mr. Boales was heard coming up the steps. The man jumped out the open window onto the back porch and descended a ladder. Mr. Boales opened fire in time to fire five shots at him as he ran across the back yard. The assassin had about been gotten but Chief of Police Fritz had been quietly working up the case for nearly a month. The only clues found were a pipe and a bottle of whisky. The latter was taken to all of the drug stores and finally at Elgin's it was identified as a bottle used by Mr. Chas. G. Mc Daniel. Subsequently the bottle was returned to Mr. Mc Daniel, who said he had lost it. Having this evidence Chief Fritz sought an interview with Mr. Mc Daniel and told him of his suspicions. Mr. Mc Daniel admitted that he had entered Mr. Boales' house, but said he was on a spree that night and did not remember where he was or what he did. His house was on a lot adjoining Mr. Boales' in the rear and it was possible that he had gotten into the wrong house.

The matter reached this stage about ten days ago and when Mr. Boales finally learned of the results of the police investigation he stopped any effort to cover up a compromise situation by swearing out a warrant charging Mr. Mc Daniel with "housebreaking with intent to commit a felony." Officer Henry Lamer served the warrant Tuesday night and Mr. Mc Daniel was arrested and gave bond for his appearance, with Feltman & Son, his attorneys, on bond. His bail was fixed at $250 and the trial set for January 1st.

Mr. Mc Daniel, of course, declines to discuss the matter in advance of the examining trial. He is still at his place of business and is deeply mortified at the very bad scrape he is in. He is a young man about 36 years old, single and occupying a responsible position with Ritter & Co. Though addicted to intemperance, he has borne a good character for honesty and uprightness. For ten years he was book-keeper for Forbes & Bro. for four years was in the revenue service under Collector Feltman. Two years has held his present place. In all these positions, he proved himself to be a valued employee except for occasional sprees.

Few people believe that he could have entered the house with the intention of taking any property away, and the master has been the talk of the town for the past week, everyone trying to assign some reasonable motive. The attorneys in the case refuse to outline the theory of the defense, but intimate that there will be further developments to show that Mr. Mc Daniel was irresponsible from drunkenness and merely blundering around ignorant of what he was doing.

Mr. Boales' boarding house is patronized by some of the best families in this city and he is determined to prosecute the case vigorously, whatever may have been the cause of the intrusion.

The case promises to be one of more than ordinary interest, when it is called for trial before Judge Breathitt next Wednesday.

Don't fail to hear the most popular of all lecturers on the 17th. Taylor will tickle you.

AN ARKANSAS HUNT.

SUCCESSFUL OUTING OF THE CHRISTIAN COUNTY HUNTING CLUB.

Diary of Camp Life—Incidents of the Austin P. Hunt.

Friday, Nov. 13th.—Mr. Ferguson and Mr. Strout, two gentlemen from Red Fork, are hunting with us. The Arkansans, with Norton and Ransom, go bear hunting, but have no success. The others drive the woods north of camp and Mr. Ferguson and Capt. White shoot at a doe, which they jump in the drive. Cross over the new levee and hunt the woods beyond. Catlett shoots at a large doe, which goes by his stand, and Bradley fires three rifle shots at her as she goes by him. Between the two she was hit, evidenced by her bloody trail. But she still had speed and strength to go, for she left all of the dogs except Luke's Bob, and after sundown she crossed the bottom below camp, struck Lake Jefferson above and swam two hundred and fifty yards to the other shore, Luke's faithful hound on her heels until she took water.

Some ducks and a coon the fruits of the day's hunt.

Saturday, Nov. 14th.—This weather is glorious. The night was cool but the day is full of glorious sunshine. Several different squads scour the country. Powers, with Catlett and Norton, cross the river and try the island for bear; the main body of the hunt go to the woods beyond Murphy's house, full four miles distant, while Bradley and Tainter, in a skiff, try.

"Squire Jones and his son, Gordon, go home this morning. We were sorry to see them go, for they are good men and true."

Bradley and Tainter return to camp about noon with three wild geese, which they had shot and found to be fat and fine—I mean the geese—and weigh forty-five pounds.

The deer hunters went down into the Montgomery deadening beyond the Murphy house and in this new region lost their trail and wandered aimlessly, but eventually found the trail again. They were fat and fine—meant to be fat and fine—I mean the deer.

As the dogs were baying in the evening the dogs brought a large doe by Ferguson, who killed her at a long shot. Make other drives with no success. Powers and his bear hunters returned at dark with no success beyond the frightening of a rabbit almost to death. No mast, and hence no bear.

Sunday, Nov. 15th.—Hal Lenox returned home this morning. Hal is a good boy, and a good hunter and our good friend. Baldwin, came into camp bringing the antlers of a four-point buck which he had killed off our grounds.

What a beautiful and bright morning it is! In my years of service in camp I have never known a Sunday otherwise. As if our God on His chosen day, smiles with a Father's beneficence upon His children, and thank God, His mercies are not strained but fall alike upon the poor as upon the rich, and with favoring grace upon all.

As I sit here at the kitchen table and write these "notes" to night, my wife recalls to memory that friend and splendid specimen of manhood who used to preside over this department and more, long ago.

Will Davis Garnett was a man whom we loved, and who had twined himself with our very heart strings. Brave, manly, devoted to his friends and an ardent hunter, could it be otherwise? He had the strength of Hercules, yet a heart full of the tenderness of a loving woman. I remember once, being upon these hunting grounds, when the dogs had driven a desperate bear to bay in a cane-brake, when others fell exhausted by the way, his superlative strength carried him to the scene of combat, where he bore down upon the bear, killing dogs as fast as they reached him. Garnett rushed in, placed his gun to the brute's ear, fired, killed the bear and burst his gun. Such things as this showed the indomitable courage of our friend.

He was the soul and life of camp. Under his directions tents went up, camp dried up, and when the time came, and then he would go as far in the woods as any man. As an awakener of sleeping men, he had no superior. When the early hour to get up came, even before the stars had set, he would visit every man and say,

FACTS ABOUT BERLIN.

Social Changes Indicated by a Census of Occupations.

Some statistics have just been published relating to the census of occupations taken in Berlin in the middle of last year. A peculiar feature presented in the general result is that the number of persons actually engaged in professions, trades or productive industry has increased by more than the total addition to the population since 1882. On June 14, 1895, the population of 130,447 was 3,615,017, as against 1,023 who were employed in the former profession or trade, or in an occupation against 274,053 in 1882. The total number of persons dependent on those in active work was 789,100 in 1895, as compared with 581,792 in 1882. Independently of these there were respectively 63,283 of no fixed occupation in 1895, and 42,197 in 1882. The number of persons in domestic service in the German capital had very slightly increased in the 14 years, having risen from 58,003 to no more than 61,063. The changes which have been brought about during this interval in the numbers employed and the numbers dependent are shown by the percentages of the population so classified at the two periods. Thus in 1895, of every 100 inhabitants of the capital, 43.33 were engaged in trades or professions, as against 41.05 in 1882. The domestic service class was represented at the two periods by 3.75 and 5.01 per cent respectively, and the class without occupations by 4.08 and 3.65. Another curious fact which is brought out by the results is that the number of persons engaged in productive industry has increased more rapidly than those whose calling concerns productive industry and manufacture generally. In 1882 there were 40,451 employed in productive industry, as compared with 253,292 in 1895, while in commerce and traffic the numbers of the two periods were 180,916 and 110,544 respectively. In other words, in 1895 there were 55.75 per cent pursuing productive industries, whereas in 1882 there were only 32.55 per cent. On the other hand, the relative numbers engaged in commerce and traffic rose from 21.28 per cent in 1882 to 23.64 in 1895.

It is only in textile industries and certain branches of art industry that the figures show a slight decrease. In metallic manufactures, on the contrary, there has been a very large increase—namely, from 29,675 in 1882 to 45,724 in 1895. In the manufacture of machinery, the numbers employed rose from 21,216 to 32,895, in the building trades from 35,224 to 57,292, in mining and allied trades from 3,720 to 14,663, in traffic and the distribution of goods, from 22,625 to 25,295. In chemical industries the persons occupied were nearly doubled in number, having increased from 2,243 to 4,640, while in the insurance department there was a rise from 1,410 to 2,706. Persons engaged in restaurants and in places of like nature, more than doubled in the 14 years, the numbers being 13,016 and 36,210 respectively. The lowest class of laborers show an increase from 22,496 to 31,216. Those belonging to the army or to the civil service, together with those wholly independent, rose from 51,111 to 72,843, while those who were in receipt of income from house property or shares show an augmentation from 42,197 to 63,233. It may be added that the number of persons engaged in productive industry in the rapidly rising suburb of Charlottenburg increased from 30,046 in 1882 to 124,047 in 1895, while those employed in traffic and commerce in the same center rose from 13,070 to 46,714.—London Times.

The Servant Girl.

An illustration of the latter day requirements of servants, a correspondent sends me a letter she has just received in answer to an advertisement for an upper parlormaid. The applicant writes an excellent hand, expresses herself well—with one or two lapses—really very well. Indeed, she would make a valuable acquisition for any household. If only from the fact that she is quite accustomed "to take the head of dinner parties." She however, has a bicycle which would have to be carefully housed for her, and she would require a free afternoon weekly to ride it—starting a wheel, one presumes, in rights, from a door. My correspondent, who seems a temperate person, makes no comment on this letter beyond remarking that, as she keeps eight female servants, it would be rather awkward if they all rode bicycles.—Gentlewoman.

The schoolmaster gave a wild howl and fell with a bang from his wheel. "What is it?" cried his favorite pupil, as she circled around him. "It's a 'tack!'" moaned the master. "In your tires!" "No, in my saddle."

The word infamous was once applied to a person who was not permitted to give evidence in a court of justice.

A TIPSY S.

Feathered Friends Took Care of Him as Best They Could.

I chanced to see a queer little episode in which a party of English sparrows were the actors. At the back door of a little saloon down on Royal street a bottle of champagne had been broken, the spilling still running out and collecting in puddles on the creosote stone pavement. Just about the time I chanced along this ubiquitous young sparrow, perhaps not exactly upon pleasure, but having had enough of company, took up his perch on a conductor's pocket-knife, watched him for a few moments flapping and toppling about on the sidewalk, wondering what would happen next, when down fluttered two other little sparrows, who evidently came to see what was up. They lost no time in taking in the situation, either, for better chattering and chirping to their tipsy bird and smelling the champagne puddle, they appeared to be tipsy themselves. Then two more sparrows, who were evidently not in the least bit tipsy, came to the banquet and dumped him over in the gutter. At first I thought they were murdering the poor, helpless little fellow, but it soon became evident that they were taking the only means in their power to resuscitate him, for presently he came up again, dripping, it is true, but with the worst of the coming overhead trolley wires. Still another gave it as his opinion that the words were uttered by the "spook" of a conductor who had been knocked down by death in the spring, after dicing all the cards, but in a necessary way, who is to be found everywhere, suggested that the only way to solve the mystery was to drop a nickel in the slot. His suggestion was not acted upon, for just at that moment there appeared at an adjacent man-hole of the cable line the tousled head, mischievous eye and dirty face of a young boy and bootblack, who impudently winking at the crowd assembled, before returning to the conduit, cried in accents shrill but clear. "Just tell them that you saw me."

Thinking everything was over, I went down on to the French market, attended to my business and came back, having been about two hours gone, to see the three little sparrows standing on the pavement just where I had left them. Wondering what they could be up to I waited, and was presently rewarded by seeing another sparrow fly down and join the others. Then came a mighty chattering and pecking at the remains of the feast, and finally, at the wine-pool and bird-nibbler four feet away. By and by still another came, the same process being repeated for him, and by this time I was convinced that the first three had taken up their station by the dangerous liquor to warn others against falling into temptation.—Philadelphia Times.

A FARM BOY'S RAILROAD.

Time and Labor-Saving Device of an Ingenious Lad.

Robert M. Tyler, aged 17, has built a railroad with rolling stock on the farm of his father, William M. Tyler, at Buck's Hill, a suburb of Waterbury. He showed considerable mechanical skill in constructing the roadbed and laying the rails from the house through the fields and over brooks to a walnut grove at the head of the hill. Every rail he built, the car and the engine and boiler in place. It has proved a very useful as well as creditable enterprise, much time and labor being saved by it, and farm labor being made much more attractive.

The boy thus describes his system: "The rails are of steel, T-shaped, the lightest made of this description, weighing only eight pounds to the yard. The crossties are chestnut, three and one-half feet long, four inch face and three inches thick. The gauge is 26 inches. The grade is 1 in 100, the steepest being 300 feet to the mile."

"The whole cost of constructing the railroad was at the rate of $600 a mile, the engine, boiler and car costing about $300 more. The engine is rated 3 horsepower, stands upright, is double acting, reversible, and makes 800 revolutions a minute. The boiler is also a two horsepower, upright, holding six gallons of water. It generates steam rapidly, can get up steam in five or six minutes and uses but little fuel."

"This small engine and boiler will propel a car a short distance, draw a load of 1,000 pounds. We find the engine and boiler very useful for other purposes, such as grinding grain, cutting feed, sawing wood, etc."

It is interesting to speculate on advantages to farmers who should establish similar systems and then connect them with others in the neighborhood. —Hartford Courant.

The House Fly.

The astonishing abundance of flies during the latter part of the summer is accounted for by the estimate made by an eminent entomologist that the progeny of a single house fly in the course of one summer, will number 2,060,320. If it were not for the innumerable enemies provided by nature for the destruction of flies, the whole air would be filled, by the end of August, with swarms of flies which would render life impossible.

Courage is adversity's lamp.—Vanvergauges.

VOICES IN THE CONDUIT.

Two Youngsters in a Cellar Vault Mystery, Pt. 2.

This is a story of how two policemen came near being sold for a more song: "Just tell them that you saw me."

There was a quiet on Fifth avenue between Glad and Jamison streets one night that was only punctuated by the chirr of an occasional cricket and the modified clatter of a few benighted wayfarers. Fair Luna, to keep the chill off, threw over Moton Earth a shawl of silvery shoen. People sat on their doorsteps doing nothing and sleeping to keep warm. Suddenly there arose above their listening ears the plural is used because there was one ear, was a noise, a sound, one ear was brought into motion, a rattle, a yell from the street, blue lights, as Stephen Crane would have it. "Just tell them that you saw me."

In all that wide expanse (from Gist street to Jimmoun street) not a soul was to be seen, save the people on the doorsteps. The officer was not on a passing car, for there were no passing cars. The ears had passed, and had lost their grip. Over all that section a halo of mysticism hovered. Conjecture was spread with a capital "C." And even with the wonder of it, there rose that whisper of terror: "Just tell them that you saw me."

One man expressed the belief that a photograph had been placed in the conduit by some practical joker. Another man declared that banish was expressing his disapproval of the coming overhead trolley wires. Still another gave it as his opinion that the words were uttered by the "spook" of a conductor who had been knocked down by death in the spring, after dicing all the cards, but in a necessary way, who is to be found everywhere, suggested that the only way to solve the mystery was to drop a nickel in the slot. His suggestion was not acted upon, for just at that moment there appeared at an adjacent man-hole of the cable line the tousled head, mischievous eye and dirty face of a young boy and bootblack, who impudently winking at the crowd assembled, before returning to the conduit, cried in accents shrill but clear. "Just tell them that you saw me."

Now, nobody objected to the boy understanding the rat by going into this underground trap, but everybody objected to the youngster leaving the trap-door open behind him. The open man-holes were a source of great danger to cyclists and pedestrians. The police were notified. Even as the messengers moved toward the station house there was heard the cry: "Just tell them that you saw me."

A company of policemen went to the spot. Like soldiers, they ascended up and down the street, with lanterns in their hands, but for a long time nothing came of it. Ever and anon the back of one of the boys (there were two of them in the conduit) would be seen through the slot, and the policemen would call to them. But it did no good. At the end of an hour the policemen decided to watch a couple of man-holes and tire the boys out. They were quite sure the boys were between the two man-holes, but they were mistaken.

The policemen, who had been so soon settled themselves to wait, the boy who had been in the conduit was thrown open, and one of the boys popped out, his head just long enough to shout: "Just tell them that you saw me!"

By this time a large number of people had gathered on the street, and the majority of those present entered into the humor of the situation and sympathized with the boys. Men talked to them through the slot, and posted them as to the whereabouts of the policemen. By this means the youths were engaged, upright, holding six gallons of water. It generates steam rapidly, can get up steam in five or six minutes and uses but little fuel.

"This small engine and boiler will propel a car a short distance, draw a load of 1,000 pounds. We find the engine and boiler very useful for other purposes, such as grinding grain, cutting feed, sawing wood, etc."

It is interesting to speculate on advantages to farmers who should establish similar systems and then connect them with others in the neighborhood. —Hartford Courant.

Told of Whittier.

Mrs. Ward tells a good story in McClure's of Whittier. He was driving a restless horse, and with him in the buggy was Lucy Larcom, talking a continuous stream of brilliant ideas, deeply interesting to the poet. The horse, however, grew more and more unmanageable, perfectly uninfluenced by the high-minded company behind it, and after Whittier had struggled with him awhile he exclaimed: "Lucy, if these do not stop talking till I get this horse in hand, these will be in Heaven before they wants to."

ADDRESS TO SOUTH MAIN STREET

F.C., 11, 1896.—

The title of Wm. J. Bryan's new book, just out, is "The First Battle."

The Frankfort Capital has suspended its daily issue, but will continue to appear once a week as a Sunday paper.

Judge C. C. Givens has leased from his partner, Prof. J. J. Glenc, and is now sole owner of that excellent paper, the Madisonville Hustler.

The Republican Senators at their first caucus raised a committee of five to recommend some plan for legislation looking to an international conference to promote bimetallism.

The Madisonville Mail is one of the first newspapers in Kentucky to report the arrival of the "wave of prosperity." It added 210 new names to its subscription list last Monday.

The Spanish have again sent out from Havana a report that Gen. Macao has been killed. This is the sixth time they have killed the Cuban leader in this way, but he always turns up alive and fighting.

In one county in North Dakota—Logan—only 95 votes were cast. McKinley got 70 and Bryan 25. Billings county was not much better, giving 78 to McKinley, 27 to Bryan and 1 to Levering. Oliver county gave 69 for McKinley and 58 for Bryan. The 39 counties of the state cast less than 47,000 votes, McKinley leading Bryan by 5,751 votes.

Senator Palmer was guyed unmercifully by the silver senator when he appeared in the Senate Monday. A mock reception was held and he was introduced as "President Palmer" and the silver men crowded around to congratulate him. He took the ridicule good naturedly and "jested," himself.

The free silver convention at Madisonville Monday was a great success and a permanent bimetallic league was formed. Hon. Paul Laffoon, John Brasheer and Cliff Waddill, a former Republican, were among the speakers and much enthusiasm prevailed. The Dawson Glee Club sang several stirring songs. The meeting adjourned to meet Jan. 2.

Col. John R. Fellows, the well-known New York lawyer and politician, died Monday of acute gastritis. He was appointed District Attorney as a Democrat, but left the Democratic party last year and caught his death while stumping the country against the party ticket. He spoke in this city in October. He was about 61 years old and leaves a wife and several grown children. Col. Fellows was a creator of national reputation and was at one time a popular figure in the party he formerly affiliated with.

Judge Jas. D. White took the oath of office as Judge of the Court of Appeals Saturday and Judge Landes has returned to his home in this city. Judge White is an able lawyer and will make the state an upright, honest and capable public servant. He will serve for the unexpired term of six years and one month. The district he represents has had five judges in the last three years, three by election and two by appointment. They were Judges Casper Bennett, Ic Quigley, Jim R. Grace, J. I. Landes and now Judge White.

The President's Message is a lengthy and tiresome document, bare of new ideas. He opposes any recognition of Cuban independence, but contented himself with a suggestion that Spain grant home rule to the liberty-loving patriots. He thinks the present tariff law will soon produce enough revenue and renew his recommendation in the interests of bondholders that enough interest-bearing bonds be issued to retire the four hundred millions of greenbacks. He is evidently ambitious of breaking all records by increasing the public debt $700,000,000 instead of a paltry $262,000,000 during his administration; now happily drawing to a close.

AN ARKANSAS HUNT.

"Arius" and if the injunction was not heeded it would reach out at his strong arm and stand the sleeper on his feet and give him a shove toward the door. We miss him sorely, and strive for him, with a sorrow akin to that of his own dead ones. Born and reared in influence, misfortune in life, a declared failure in business, he was destined to a sad and far greater one than the memorial stone that marks his grave can in truth be carved this his jacket: "The noblest work of God—an angel."

Since we met our good friend and comrade, W. A. Lowry, he crossed the river and solved the mystery of sterility. Not so odd a number in point of service as General, but proved a man who could be used by all.

The men sat in a circle in the brilliant moonlight around the blazing fire, as I write and recall these sad memories. Taintor is an accomplished musician, and the tender strains from his banjo rise and float out with that music of David, which could calm the turbulent soul of Saul.

It wells and spreads on Jefferson's silver waters. At length it mitigation the blue and moonlit deep. The song and son of Adria's gondola here and there mellowed over the water sweep.

Oh! the music of that boy, as with soulful face and a master's hand, he touches the chords of his banjo. It is now sad and melancholy as the last note of the dying swan, again fierce and vindictive, as the storm. God's voice is heard in the strains of David and平原 as the strains of an Aeolian pipe, when touched by the singing breath of Zephyr.

After this let us sleep; and the fray to-morrow.

Mondays, November 16th—Up early and off to make the drive beyond the Murphy house, four miles away. Pendleton and Verner alone, as White is sick to-day. At the far end of the drives the dogs drove two does. One of them passed Bradie, who fired both barrels, but one missed. The other ran and fired Mr. Parish, he fired a charge of buck and ball full over her breast. He says that she fell over backwards with all her feet pointing to the sun, but before he could get around through the bushes to help her, a dog, Taintor, who was the faithful dog of Taintor, who fired once at her while passing, and on she went to Calet, whose stand was in a thicket of cane, bushes and fallen trees, but Addison killed her at the first shot. A very pretty, fat young doe.

White followed one pack through the woods until they came back bloody from hunting and caught and killed a dog wounded by Bradley. Before he could get them back and locate the dead deer they jumped a big buck, which went to the Mississippi and onto Ozark Island.

The dogs, when they were still running, when he rode for camp.

Moved back and made the famous drive—which never fails us—between the old levee and the river. In front of Shields' abandoned house Bradley was standing and was about thirty feet from the levee when he heard the dogs passing between him and the levee. They were not more than twenty feet. He fired from his left shoulder and knocked the buck down, but the dog, which was the first to run, then, hastily putting two in cartridges, he fired twice at the doe and knocked her down, but she got up and made away. In the meantime the buck had arisen and gone a short distance, and had Bradley, and one of the dogs after the buck and stood near until it expired. This was a very large five point buck, and his antlers shall be for generations an heirloom in the Doctor's family.

Another drive across to the Military road, and again Bradley marched solemnly to the front, and fired a few shots at the dogs, then, having put two in cartridges, he fired twice at the doe and knocked her down, but she got up and made away. In the meantime the buck had arisen and gone a short distance, and had Bradley, and one of the dogs after the buck and stood near until it expired. This was a very large five point buck, and his antlers shall be for generations an heirloom in the Doctor's family.

Everything comes to him who waits.

Capt. Pendleton and Catlett in the drive fired some long shots at deer to encourage the dogs to run. This has been a most successful day, and we have had a long hunt. Total distance fifteen or fifteen miles of ground, and the bounds running all day. We came home late and tired, but our reward was there, for John Black, our cook, had for our supper among a great variety of other good things to eat, a saddle of roasted venison, that could not be equalled in taste or worth.

White said six deer in a bunch, two bucks of which ran before him, and two does. Made drive after drive, even as far as beyond Murphy's. In brakes and hurricane roads and in clear and beautiful woods. This morning in the first drive Capt. White saw six deer in a bunch, two bucks of which ran before him, and two does. Merit

It has given Hood's Sarsaparilla its great popularity, its constantly increasing sales, and enables it to accomplish its wonderful and unequalled cures. The combination, proportion and process used in preparing Hood's Sarsaparilla are unknown to other medicines, and make Hood's Sarsaparilla

Peculiar to Itself

It cures a wide range of diseases because of its power as a blood purifier. It acts directly upon every part of the blood, and the blood reaches every nook and corner of the human system. Thus all the nerves, muscles, bones and tissues come under the beneficent influence of Congress has gotten down to business again and a few bills have already passed the House this week. A committee has been appointed in the Senate to push the Dingley tariff bill to a passage. Six Republican Senators who withdrew from the St. Louis convention, refused to go into the Republican caucus and their future party affiliation is a matter of doubt and speculation.

It is now about settled that no extra session of the Legislature will be held to elect a Senator. Gov. Bradley will after March 4 appoint a man to serve until 1898, when the new Legislature will elect Joe Blackburn.

Aching Joints

Announce the presence of rheumatism which causes untold suffering. Rheumatism is due to lactic acid in the blood. It cannot be cured by liniments or other outward applications. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, removes the lactic acid and permanently cures this disease. This is the testimony of thousands of people who once suffered the pains of rheumatism but who have actually been cured by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. Its great power to act upon the blood removes every impurity in the body. The secret of the wonderful cures by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Mo, who has probably killed more bears than any other man in the world," said a well-known Westonian who is fond of hunting.

Washington Star reporter,
at night at Uncle Dan's told stories of the "various old bear-killer calls you ever get in a very close bear?" I asked.

When I hev. The closest
I got inter war 'bost five recoons. I went a crost to a speakin' an' cum two hours by sun. I war whether it'd pay me most to taif ter git mor for my toes. When all of a sudden I didn't have a pocket knife, an old blade broke, so they use. The bar'ad me an sense that I don't have chance to get out of my bear. I said I wain't too bad trees, so I hopped for a standin' on a ledge like they bout th' same time an us, but I cum right along straight poplar, an' not big a' bol' a' bar'ad a man. It is bar', an' I went on higher, bar' breath on my feet

ended over an' I dropped down.

I wain't a prised ter see the tree straightened up 'th a in let go. Th' bar' war in light place, an' when the
was back it throwed 'm in the air. I war tuggin' at the quill when begin a big rock. He never wain't an' sol' his skin, but I never count. 'm when tellin' how I've killed, fer I didn't tell 'm. Yo' mout say he died ter an accident."

A Sufferer Cured

"Every season, from the time I was two years old, I suffered dreadfully from erysipelas, which kept growing worse until my hands were almost useless. The fingers softened so that my hand would, and several of my fingers are now useless from this cause. On my hand I carry large scars, which, but for Sarsaparilla, would be so provided I was alive and able to carry anything.

Eight bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla cured me so that I have had no return of the disease for more than twenty years.

The first bottle seemed to reach the spot and a persistent use of it has affected the cure." — O. C. Davis,

— CANINE FRIENDSHIP.

Greyhound Saves a Spaniel from Dog Pound.

"Talk about the sagacity of dogs," remarked Jenkins, as he scornfully surveyed the records of the good deeds done by canines in general.
"Why, I saw something the other day which beats the world—something which, in addition to proving the reasoning powers of dogs, showed also that some of them are capable of affection for their own kind. A friend of mine up town several days ago found a small greyhound and a spaniel, the two dogs, notwithstanding the disparity in size, being warm friends. The other day the dog catcher wagon was making the rounds and, as usual, missing the curves while coralling the animals which are well taken care of. It happened that my friend's front gate had been left open, and the two dogs mentioned escaped into the street just as the wagon turned the corner. There was a great cry on the part of the catcher, however, grasped their nets and made a scramble for the little spaniel, not seeming to like the idea of tackling the big hound. The poor little spaniel realized her danger, and attempted to escape. She flew like one possessed in every direction, only to be headed off by the men with the nets and a score of small boys. She finally halted, panting, in the middle of the street, and one of the men approached her with his
net. It seemed that the little thing's day was sealed.

"Suddenly there was a bark and the big groundhog came leaping into the crowd, scattering the small boys and compelling the catchers to take to the wagon. The hound reached the side of the spaniel and, taking in the situation, reached down, grasped his wee companion in his capacious mouth, and was off down the street like a shot. He didn't stop for the gate, but with a great, graceful leap was over the fence, and then, gently depositing the spaniel on the ground, stood wagging his tail, as if knowing that he had discomfited his enemies.
The spaniel, with a joyful wag of her small tail, was soon back again with her mate.

NOTICE

Dr. Gaines desires most earnestly and sincerely to thank the good people of Hopkinsville and surrounding country, for the very generous participation they have given him in the past, and to say that the advancing years and the infirmities incident thereto, admonishes him that part of the work is drawing to a close. Therefore in the future he will confine his practice to the limits of town (and near vicinity), and to office practice. This change will begin from January 1, 1897. Respectfully, R. W. GAINES.

The more announcement that Bob Taylor will lecture is enough to pack the opera house. "A Paradise of Fools"—new version—will be his subject.
